Vale of White Horse District Council – General Licensing Committee minutes

Thursday, 4th October, 2012

GL.3

Mr Tony Garrard spoke on behalf of Oxfordshire Unlimited. He supported the proposed policy but urged the council to do all it could to encourage taxi proprietors to provide more taxis with disabled access. He also urged the council to ensure that taxi drivers were trained in how to assist disabled passengers.

Mr Jason Atherton of Vale Auto Taxis spoke against the retention of the tariff that controlled prices for taxi journeys. He preferred to run his own tariff and provide a better service with a higher standard of vehicle. He also believed the council's test fees were too high. He reported that he did not know about this meeting until recently.

GL.8 Adjournment of meeting

RESOLVED: To adjourn the meeting to allow the committee to discuss the draft licensing policy for hackney carriage and private hire and accompanying report in conjunction with South Oxfordshire District Council's General Licensing Committee, and appoint Councillor Melinda Tilley to facilitate those discussions, before reconvening to consider this committee's recommendations.

Note: Appended to these minutes are the notes of the informal joint meeting with South Oxfordshire District Councillors.

GL.9 Joint licensing policy for hackney carriage and private hire

On reconvening, the committee considered the report of the head of legal and democratic services. This set out consultation responses to the draft policy for hackney carriages and private hire, options for various elements of the policy, and a draft policy. The committee was asked to recommend Council to adopt the policy.

The committee supported the proposed policy, including the retention of a maximum tariff for hackney carriages. However, the committee considered that the council should review the tariff and consider whether to remove the tariff system in the future. This review should commence shortly and include a public consultation exercise.

The committee thanked the officers for carrying out the policy review.

Finally, the officers were asked to investigate potential breaches of the existing policy in Abingdon Market Place.

RESOLVED: To

- (a) confirm agreement to the recommended action detailed in the options paper set out in the report;
- (b) authorise the head of legal of democratic services to incorporate the agreed actions within the joint licensing policy for hackney carriage and private hire for recommendation to Council;
- (c) request the officers to review the hackney carriage tariff, and as part of that review, consider whether the tariff should be removed in the future;

RECOMMENDED: To

- (c) adopt the licensing policy for hackney carriage and private hire to come into force on 1 January 2013; and
- (d) authorise the head of legal and democratic services in consultation with the chairmen of the South Oxfordshire and Vale of White Horse District Councils' General Licensing Committees to make minor administrative amendments to the policy where necessary.

Joint licensing policy for hackney carriage and private hire

Councillors from the General Licensing Committees of South Oxfordshire District Council and Vale of White Horse District Council met informally to discuss the draft policy for hackney carriage and private hire. Councillor Melinda Tilley, chairman of the Vale's committee, chaired the meeting.

Councillors noted that there had been 114 consultation responses to draft policy. These had been analysed and an options paper prepared for councillors to debate the policy elements. In answer to questions from councillors, the officers reported that they had informed all consultation respondents of the date, time, and venue of this meeting by email on 27 September.

Councillors considered the options paper, set out in appendix 2 to the committee report. This set out in detail the issues raised in the consultation and made a recommendation on each issue. Councillors supported almost all of the recommendations bar one, that relating to the proposal to introduce a maximum tariff for hackney carriages in South Oxfordshire and retain the tariff system in the Vale. Officers explained that they wanted to introduce a tariff across both districts for public safety reasons. They gave an example of the public disorder problems that occurred at Henley Regatta when the public were trying to hire taxi cabs. This would be overcome by introducing a tariff system that set a maximum fee proprietors could charge. In the Vale, the tariff was displayed in every taxi and was checked when the vehicles were tested.

Over 360 councils across the country operated a hackney carriage tariff scheme. The Vale's existing scheme had a basic two-rate structure (one tariff for daytime, another for the night) but the tariff was in need of review to give more flexibility. Any changes to the tariff would have to be advertised by law and consultation responses sought from the public and the taxi trade. Changes to the tariff would be a cabinet decision, not a decision for the General Licensing Committee. Despite consulting on whether to review the tariff, there had been no changes for four years, even though there had been significant increases in fuel costs. The trade had not called for a review of the tariff during that period.

Some councillors queried the need for a maximum tariff in South Oxfordshire. In answer to a question from a councillor, the officer reported that he had no evidence that a price-fixing cartel existed in the district. Some councillors suggested the council should adopt a scheme similar to the one suggested by Mr Pryor, with proprietors setting their own tariff. However, the officers expressed caution, believing that this would be difficult for the council to manage and enforce, and would result in the need for additional resources. There were over 400 hackney carriages registered in South Oxfordshire.

Some councillors were uneasy about setting a tariff for hackney carriages in South Oxfordshire, believing it would curb free enterprise and would cost the council to administer the scheme.

Vale councillors generally believed that the tariff should be retained in their district but it should be restructured to make it more flexible. However, they did not rule out the possibility of the council removing the tariff in the longer term.

After a short adjournment, the informal joint meeting continued. Councillors continued to review the other policy options. Councillors agreed with the remaining recommendations but asked that the spoken English test was introduced as soon as possible, preferably as early as January 2013.

Councillors from the two councils agreed that there was only one area where opinions differed, that relating to hackney carriage tariffs. Councillors agreed to the remaining policy recommendations set out in the options paper.

Councillor Melinda Tilley then closed the informal meeting.
